

BANKERS ARE IN SESSION

Adopt Resolutions, Oppose Credits, and Declare Against Elastic Currency.

VERY STRINGENT

Believes That Form of Money Is Not What the People Really Want.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 7.—Credit currency and branch banking did not meet with favor at the hands of the Wisconsin Bankers' association, which closed its ninth annual session in this city.

Strong arguments were presented in favor of an elastic currency, based on the credit of the financial institutions and their deposits, by James H. Eckels, president of the Commercial National bank of Chicago, and by Charles N. Fowler, chairman of the committee on banks and currency of the House of Representatives, but even such high authority as this could not shake the faith of the Wisconsin bankers that a currency based on such security was not what the people wanted.

Disagree as to Remedy. It was contended by A. J. Frame of Waukesha, and the resolutions adopted at the close of the afternoon session shows that he had the best of the argument, so far as the jury to which he made his appeal was concerned.

The resolution is pronounced against credit currency as a relief from the stringency in the money market which comes annually when the crops of the great West are to be moved to the markets of the East. While the bankers are agreed that new legislation is necessary to meet the emergency, they disagree as to what that legislation should be.

Charles N. Fowler, in his address in the afternoon, made a strong argument in favor of a credit currency, during which he referred to the notes issued fifty years ago by George Smith and Alexander Mitchell of this city in the name of the Marine Fire Insurance company, which were redeemable in gold, and passed current all over the United States and on which, he said, not a dollar had been lost. This, he maintained, was a practical demonstration of credit currency.

Statement by Eckels. Mr. Eckels in the course of his address said:

"The financial and currency reformer knows that the laws affecting the conduct of the government's treasury department are wholly wrong, and those which have to do with the issuing of promissory notes by the banks to circulate as the representatives of money are in many respects unsatisfactory, and do not accord either with the truths of economic history or the experience of the business world. He wishes these defects remedied and these unnecessary hindrances to business undertakings removed, and until they are his mission will not end or his protest against a false system cease.

"And he will not fail. I am as confident of the ultimate success of the reforms urged as I was twenty years ago that a great commercial people would have no monetary standard here but gold.

"I do not hesitate to make the assertion that Congress will not long deny the business world legislation that is so urgently required, if banks are to fulfill their duties to labor, trade, and commerce and become, as they ought to be, the essential aids in the conduct of the undertakings of an industrious and intelligent nation.

Banks Are Hampered.

"I am not unmindful of the fact that revolutionary reforms will not do, or radical measures benefit, but the way must be pointed and the first steps taken toward doing away with thoroughly wrong financial features in the conduct of the treasury, and the expensive and inadequate note-issuing functions granted to the banks under governmental control. If the subtreasury cannot at this time be wholly abolished, it surely should be rendered as nearly impotent for harm as possible.

"If the government cannot do as every successful business man does, transact all its business through the institutions created and equipped for that purpose, namely, the banks, let it do as great a part as it can.

"The curtailment and hindrance of the usefulness of the banks in their buying and selling, as well as their distribution of bank-note credits, is apparent on every hand. Their power for good is needlessly hampered in denying to them a larger freedom in the matter of selling to the business world in another form than that of drafts and bills of exchange, namely, the bank-note, the credit of which they are possessed and which the business man must buy in order to meet the needs for which the larger instruments of banking credit are not available.

CATTLE AND KITTENS DROP DEAD IN DAKOTA

Gaseous Matter in the Air Has Peculiar Effect on Live Stock and Other Animals.

Oacoma, S. D., Aug. 7.—The past week has been the warmest in the history of this country. On Friday a heavy rain fell, thoroughly soaking the ground. Preceding the rain was a period of depression in the atmosphere that was phenomenal.

During the day nearly every kitten less than six months old in the vicinity of Oacoma died, whole litters being found lying dead together, apparently from the effects of some gaseous matter in the air. A bunch of eighteen head of cattle in one drove was seen coming down from the flats, when eight of them fell to the ground. A farmer living near by ran out to them and found six of the eight already dead. The other two jumped up and ran frantically away.

John Morris, a stockman living on White river, reports the loss of six head the same day. No losses have occurred since, none prior to that time, and it is generally believed that the copious rains which have fallen since have neutralized whatever of poison to animal life may have been in the air.

GIVES LIBRARY TO BELVIDERE

Mrs. Katherine Rhinehart Makes Gift in Memory of Her Father.

Belvidere, Ill., Aug. 7.—As a memorial to her father, Gen. Allen C. Fuller, Mrs. Katherine Rhinehart has offered to build a library building for Belvidere to cost not less than $25,000. In making the offer Mrs. Rhinehart does not ask for the usual Carnegie conditions of a fixed appropriation annually, but merely specifies that the city shall maintain the building as a public library. She also guards against any possible strife between the two sides of the river by stating that she will also furnish the site and will select it herself. The father of Mrs. Rhinehart left a fortune of over $1,000,000, the bulk of it going to his daughter, a part of it being left to his brother, Charles H. Fuller of Chicago, and other heirs.

Various Lungs.

Three human lungs lie next one another in the anatomical museum at Edinburgh university. The first is that of an Eskimo and is snow-white. In life this would, of course, be ruddy from the presence of blood. The third is that of a coal miner and is coal black. The intermediate one is that of a town dweller and is a dirty slate-gray, as are the lungs of all dwellers in cities at this moment.

DENIES SHE MURDERED SPECTACLE PEDDLER

Mrs. Hodge Admits She Shot at Man, But Says She Did Not Inflict Wound on Head.

Salt Lake, Utah, Aug. 7.—Mrs. Aurora Hodge, who confessed in Grand Rapids, Mich., that she was implicated in the murder of William X. Ryan, an aged spectacle peddler, near Murray, Utah, a few weeks ago, and who has been brought here for trial, now declares she did not fire the shot that killed Ryan.

Ryan's remains were exhumed and a large bullet hole found in the top of the head.

"If he died from that wound, I did not kill him," she said to her attorneys. "I admit that I shot at him. I tied his hands over by the big tree, but he got loose and started after me. To protect myself I fired at his side. It would have been impossible for me to shoot him in the crown of the head when he was up and running. He was not tied when I shot at him, and if he was found tied some one else did it."

A picture in Mrs. Hodge's effects has been identified as that of a man who was seen in company with Ryan and Mrs. Hodge a few days before the murder. Mrs. Hodge at first said the picture was that of her husband. This she now denies. The police believe this man was the accomplice, and have reason to believe that he is in Mexico.

RUSSIAN SOLDIERS MALTREAT WORKERS

Drive Strikers into a Compact Mass at Points of Bayonets and Apply the Lash.

Kloft, Russia, Aug. 7.—Fierce rioting and many fights between strikers and cossacks have resulted from the strike in the railway and private workshops in south Russia. Here the trouble was started by an attempt on the strikers' part to interfere with railroad traffic. When the mob refused to disperse the cossacks fired, killing and wounding many.

A quarter of a million men are affected. The outbreak started simultaneously over a vast industrial area. The amount of studied organization and well-concealed preparation is unprecedented in the troubled annals of Russian labor. Prices of the necessities of life are rising by leaps and bounds.

One of the most severe attacks on them was made by order of Gen. Arzenoff, governor of Odessa. Groups of men who assembled with the intention of holding a meeting were driven into a solid mass by 500 cossacks, backed by two lines of infantry with fixed bayonets. About 2,000 strikers were thus inclosed by a double cordon. Then the cossacks rode through them, striking right and left with heavy whips, the fallen men being trampled under the horses' feet.

When the living mass had been thoroughly kneaded to the governor's will numerous men were arrested as suspected agitators. The infantry then marched off, and the strikers scattered in a dozen directions with cossacks at their heels. Four hundred strikers were more or less seriously injured, and from six to a dozen succumbed.

WHITE SLAVE FREE AGAIN

Seventeen-Year Old Girl Escapes from Her Bondage on South Dakota Farm.

SOLD AS A BABY

Her Father Disposed of Her for Twenty-Five Dollars, So He Could Go Home.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—A 17-year-old white girl slave has arrived in Chicago. A twentieth-century underground railway helped the child slave to escape from a life of bondage in South Dakota.

Louise Haby, the girl who at last has found freedom, was clad in the rough garments of a farm laborer and showed the simplicity of a Georgia "cracker" when she arrived in Chicago. A single garment of one piece covered her entire body. On her head was a broad-brimmed straw hat and on her feet were the heavy brogans of a laborer.

John Mayer, 6323 Normal avenue, her uncle, and a solicitor for the New York Life Insurance company, is the one who accomplished her deliverance. His wife is a sister to the girl's mother. Two months ago the girl heard of the existence of the two relatives in Chicago. Surprisingly she wrote a letter and contrived to slip it into the hands of a neighboring ranchman go' toward the post-office.

Father Sells Child.

She had been bound to a family which owned a ranch near Highmore, S. D., for fifteen years. She had known no other parents or other life except what she gleaned from stray papers, as her father had sold her and disappeared when she was two years old. He is now believed to be in South America, but after he received word of her whereabouts, he came back.

When she was sold, he was a young man, and she was a baby. The ranch was sold, and she came to assist.

Considering her privation, the girl is unusually intelligent.

"All except two years of my life have been years of cruel treatment and hard work," said the girl. "From the time I was large enough I was made to do the work of a man. Every morning at 5 o'clock I was called to work. My first duty was to bring in the cattle, which every night strayed three or four miles across the prairie from the ranch. Morning and evening for years I have milked eight of the cows. Every day there was the churning and the preparing of the butter for market.

"It was my duty to wash up the cans after the milking before starting to assist with the regular work on the ranch. I worked with the men in the fields and rode with the boys across the prairies. I can pitch hay with the best of them or break a horse for riding or driving.

Girl Digs a Well.

"This summer I dug a twenty-foot well and no one else touched pick or shovel to it. Every evening in the winter I pumped enough water for sixty cows during the following day. At that time I wore felt boots and a man's reefer and cap to protect me from the biting wind which swept over the prairie.

"In all these years my only rest was during a few hours on Sunday afternoons. Then I was able to read or amuse myself as I pleased if I was successful in eluding the other members of the family. It was in this way that I picked up what little knowledge I have of the world. It has always been my fondest dream to escape from the ranch, but until two months ago, when I learned of my relatives, I never imagined that it would be fulfilled.

LILLIAN'S BURGLAR

(Written for The Gazette) Mrs. Luce had gone to spend the evening with a sick friend and her daughter, Lillian had gone to take a dish of jelly to the little lame girl across the way.

Mr. Luce was a prominent resident of Trenton who had amassed a small fortune in the broom factory. For nearly a year he had been in the South, in hopes of recovering his health. Mrs. Luce and the only child, Lillian, had vague ideas about the incompetency of servants, and as soon as Mr. Luce was on the train bound for Florida, the servants of the Luce home were discharged.

Their home was no mansion. It consisted of a beautiful and cozy cottage situated on the outskirts of the town. Surrounded by a spacious lawn with its trees and flower garden, the whole presented a very pretty picture of a typical American homestead.

The petted, (but by no means spoiled) child, Lillian was a very pretty girl, over whose head crowned with raven tresses, the joys of sixteen summers had swiftly flown. Her form was tall and slender, and when she was dressed in a dainty gown as was her custom she presented a charming picture of purity.

On this particular evening, Mrs. Luce had decided that the dishes, had better be left until they should return home.

It was nearly eight o'clock when Lillian reached home, and as her mother had not yet returned, she proceeded to clear the table and wash the dishes.

Presently, in the corner of the cupboard, a little mouse began its work of gnawing a hole, much to the dissatisfaction of mother's helper. "O dear, O dear, That dreadful mouse, I suppose he will go away soon enough, if I sing him a song."

Then, through the rooms of the house rang the sweet tones and words of a sacred song: "Will you Meet Your Mother, There?" She had completed the first verse and chorus, when she thought she heard her bed-room door open. Her first impulse was to run out of doors, "But, pshaw, what's the use of my being such a coward. The house is securely locked and my imagination is certainly—"

"Why, yes, the house was securely locked, Miss but we fellows prefer windows to doors and darkness to daylight."

Heavens! What a feeling of sickness and horror! She, alone and confronted by a burglar, masked! Like a statue of weakness, she stood, rooted to the floor, and almost ready to faint.

"Now, Miss, I know you, and I know your father better. If you will elope that song again and don't give me away, I'll bid you good-bye, and part friends. I was two years alone in my study of medicine, when my father lost his fortune, and my mother died. Then, determined to get money enough to finish my course, I thought a few 'night pulls' would not hurt me and I'd get along faster. Sing your song, little lass, then I'm going. Don't be frightened, I'll not harm a hair of your pretty head."

Compelled by a fear of him, she sang in a trembling and weak voice the first verse and chorus. Then she broke down and fell to the floor. By the prompt assistance of her unwelcome caller she soon revived and with mask in his hand, he said: "I'm going, Miss. My name is John Calley, but I've made a call of this kind for the last time. I'll see you again some day and I hope you will pray for me. With your help, I'll meet my mother, there. May I go out by a door, please?"

Just as he passed the gate Mrs. Luce appeared around the corner. "Who was your caller, Lillian, and how pale you are. What's the matter? Tell me my child."

"O, that mouse, came near eating me up, and John happened along and we scared it away."

ed in the same house as when the story opened.

Miss Lillian Luce was to entertain a few friends at a "Manhattan" and on this May evening, she was discussing with her mother, the coming social event. In the midst of their planning, the door bell rang and Lillian proceeded to find out who the caller might be.

"Is this Miss Luce?" asked a fine looking man of about thirty years, as he gazed into the eyes of the beautiful young woman. "I wish to speak with you and your mother, if convenient."

He was asked into the parlor, where he presented his card to Mrs. Luce.

Dr. J. Hobart Calley, San Francisco 4742 Bay Street, California.

"I am the son of Hobart Calley, of whom you have, no doubt, heard your husband speak. They were fast friends in their younger days. Yes, father died about seven years ago. I am just now on my way West after visiting my old home and thought you would be pleased to see the son of your dear husband's friend."

Lillian could command no speech, no word of welcome to the burglar of years ago. She sat through the evening looking out of the window, until, complaining of a headache, she retired.

Mrs. Luce prevailed upon charming Mr. Calley to spend a week with them which he gladly did.

Then he, and Lillian decided to say nothing of their previous meeting and dear Mrs. Luce remained in ignorance. "For" said Dr. Calley, "where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise, and I never could win you then."

"The latest engagement of the week is that of Dr. J. Hobart Calley of San Francisco to Miss Lillian Annette Luce. The wedding will take place New Year's eve, and will be the largest social event of the season."

So read the papers; society nods her sage head in approval; but—what if she knew all?

THISTLES MUST NOW BOW DOWN

New Invention That Rids the Fields of the Pest in Quick Order.

Some use of a weed killing apparatus might be made in Janesville in some of the vacant lots that are infected with burdocks and other noxious growths. Professor Lindgren, the inventor of "Thistle" is at Joliet, and the Republican has the following says the Rockford Star:

Professor Lindgren, inventor of "Thistle," is in Joliet again, a test which he is making for the Rock Island railroad taking him through here. Last week he was working along the right of way east of here where the weeds are extremely luxuriant.

In describing his experience, he says that the weeds are of such a height that an ordinary man is hidden from view when in their midst and grew so rapidly that it was impossible for the section gangs to keep the right of way clear.

With his weed killing preparation Professor Lindgren has covered the ground carefully and with the effects of the treatment officials express themselves as well pleased.

"It was something like working in a dense forest," said the professor, "and when you get among the weeds you could not see about you at all. But Thistle is doing the work, and these same forests will soon be a thing of the past."

In the use that the city of Joliet has been making of his preparation Professor Lindgren was interested and was pleased to know that it had been giving satisfaction.

"In Detroit," he said, "the street department has used 250 gallons of Thistle up to July 5. One man has been assigned to this work and he has succeeded in accomplishing an undertaking that a force of men with scythes could not begin to cope with."

"Not only have the streets been freed from weeds of all kinds, but the city has been able to save about one-third on the expense in keeping its thoroughfares in shape."

"The street car company also makes common use of Thistle, and its right of way is free from the usual weed adornments. This is not only true of the lines inside the limits but also in the outlying districts."

"At first the officials were slow to make use of the preparation, but both the city officials and the highway commissioners went after and compelled them to get down to business."

National Tennis Play

Champion Larned May Meet British Title Holder, R. F. Doherty, In Challenge Match at Newport, R. I. • Baseball and Pugilistic Talk.

The national tennis championship meet to be held at Newport, R. I., beginning Aug. 18, should be one of the most interesting of the series. The presence of the Dohertys, English champions, will be one of the features, as also will be the appearance of the Wrenn brothers in doubles against the Dohertys.

The Wrenn brothers, Bob and George L. Jr., were picked to meet the Dohertys, H. L. and R. F., in the recent international matches at Longwood, Mass. Bob was for several years national champion of America in singles and forfeited the title by going to Cuba with Roosevelt's rough riders. He is one of the greatest players ever produced in America.

W. A. Larned, the national singles champion, will play the winner of the all comers tourney, by which name the national contests are known, for the title. As R. F. Doherty, who is the singles champion of Great Britain, is entered in the all comers, it is very likely that he will win and thereby qualify to meet Larned, just as he did a year ago, when Larned defeated him in sensational style in the challenge match.

One of the much agitated topics in the sporting world is the fight between George Gardner, who recently defeated Jack Root, and Bob Fitzsimmons.

GEORGE GARDNER, WHO IS TO FIGHT FITZSIMMONS.

The men are to fight for what is known as the world's "light heavy weight" championship.

The match will probably take place at Fort Erie, Ont., in Jack Hermann's Fort Erie Athletic club. Fitzsimmons, always confident, is sure that he will defeat Gardner in summary fashion. Gardner, who is about as heavy as Jeffries, and who has the frame of a giant, is equally certain that he will dispose of the champion.

A purse of $15,000 will be apportioned between the fighters. San Francisco clubs desired the fight, but were unable to raise sufficient money to obtain it.

Just how Corbett regards his chances in the approaching battle may best be learned from a letter he recently wrote to a friend. Jim said:

"I feel that I have it on Mr. Jeffries. I cannot believe he can whip me, and I can only be convinced by his putting me out again. But I am going to make that big fellow step some. I know most people don't think I have a look in, but I don't care what anybody thinks. I am sure I have a great chance. Of course he is a big, strong young fellow and all that, but if I win so much more to my credit."

It is evident from the confident tone of the former champion's remarks that he is not worrying over the outcome of his encounter with the champion. He nevertheless feels that he has a tough proposition to dispose of in his huge opponent, and he is going about the job in a determined manner.

Eddie Graney, who will referee the fight, has had considerable experience in this line and is well liked by both the big pugilists.

An amusing incident at the ladies' show in England was the gullelessness of an American exhibitor who insisted upon detailing her dog's pedigree to the judge before the judging. It was a pug. This reminds one of the story of the woman at a show who explained that her dog, that had been unnoticed by the judge, had such a splendid pedigree, but she had left it at home. The judge answered, "Well, madam, next time bring the pedigree and leave the dog at home."

Among the star shortstops of the country in major league circles none is deserving of higher rank than Tinker of the Chicago Nationals. Tinker has played sensational ball most of the season and has done a large share of the work that has kept Hart's club among the leaders.

There is no mistaking that Tinker ranks with Honus Wagner of Pittsburgh, Norman Elberfeld of the New York Americans and Bill Dahlen of Brooklyn, Hanlon's star who was formerly with the Chicago Nationals.

Keep your eyes on Tinker. He is greased lightning on pickups and covers a big slice of territory.

TWO KINDS OF CUP RACES.

How Reliance and Shamrock III, Will Sail In Big Contest.

Two kinds of races will be sailed during the coming contests for the America's cup—triangular and to windward and return. Every race of the series of five will be sailed over a thirty mile course.

A race to windward and return means that the yachts are to go against the wind for fifteen miles and then come home with the wind behind them. It is, of course, impossible to sail right in the eye of the wind, so the yachts sail as close as they can to it and make a zigzag course. Big yachts like the Reliance and Shamrock III, can sail fast when what sailors call four points on the wind—that is, they can sail about twenty-two and one-half degrees from the line in which the wind is blowing.

When the course is signaled the regatta committee sends a tug to measure the fifteen miles and to put a mark boat at the other end of the course.

A yacht is on the starboard tack when the wind is blowing over the starboard side, and she is on the port tack when the wind is blowing over the port side.

The triangular race has three legs of ten miles each, and the first is to windward if possible. If the wind holds true when a triangular race is sailed there is no chance to use the spinnaker, as the other two legs are reached. For these it may be possible to use a balloon jib topsail on one leg and a smaller jib topsail on the other leg.

WANNY

[Original.]

The Indian heroines of fiction are invariably beautiful, though how a girl with high cheek bones, straight, coarse hair and Indian features can be beautiful is puzzling. The heroine of this story was not only a full blooded squaw, but her dress was so unbecoming that had she had any beauty it would have been killed by the costume. Her shoes were a man's cast off India rubbers; her skirt was the short flannel undershirt of a white woman; her blouse was a man's skirt.

This costume was appropriate to a miners' camp in which Juanita, or Wanny, as she was familiarly called—a name given her by the miners because they couldn't pronounce her real name—spent most of her time. She took no pride in dress because she had no one to dress for. While miners are proverbially respectful to women of refinement, they treated this aborigine pretty much as they treated each other. Indeed she was made the scapegoat for everything. If anything was lost Wanny had stolen it; if anything went wrong Wanny was to blame. It was "Wanny, get me this," or "Wanny, get away from here." She was the fag of the camp and at the same time was always in the way.

One of the men, and one alone, realized the state of affairs and one day suggested to another who sent Wanny a mile for some tobacco without giving her a cent that she should be paid for her work. Wanny stood by and heard the suggestion, the reply, the hot words that followed, and saw Jim Burns, her defender, punch the head of Tom Archer, his antagonist. The battle may have been drawn. Such battles usually are, though the heroes of stories who defend luckless maidens always come out victorious. There was one result of the fracas, however, which was permanent. It was understood that thereafter when a man ordered Wanny to do anything for him he must pay her for doing it.

Wanny from this time received fees varying from a nickel to a quarter. At her first appearance in the miners' camp after Jim Burns' intervention she wore a real calico dress and her hair was braided and tied with a yellow ribbon that had held together a bundle of cigars. No one suspected the cause of the tidiness but Jim Burns, and he would not have suspected it had he not noticed a peculiar expression in the girl's eyes the very next time she looked at him. Jim considered it an expression of gratitude. It was more than this. The wild creature's heart had been touched with love.

Jim Burns paid no more attention to Wanny than before. That he had freed her from oppression was no reason why he should be called upon to change his bearing toward her. He had no use for a little squaw whom his associates treated very much as they would treat their horse or their dog. Wanny made no effort to secure his notice, going about apparently as indifferent to his attentions as before. Jim was rather pleased at this. He took no credit to himself for the girl's defense and was the last man to stand what he called pulchery on the part of one for whom he would do a favor. When, therefore, he saw that Wanny refrained from any marked expression of gratitude which would have been likely to draw down upon him the gibes of his associates he gave her credit for a lot of sense.

Then Jim, who was inclined to take it upon himself to regulate any infraction of camp etiquette, discipline, law and the like, thought proper one day to turn out of camp a good for nothing drunken Indian, one of the tribe to which Wanny belonged, who had their tepees a mile down the stream. The man had been hanging about, and sundry articles had been missed. Jim therefore invited him to leave and enforced his invitation with a kick.

Jim had a claim lying between the miners' and the Indians' camp and was accustomed to ride there nearly every day. One morning Wanny came to him and said:

"No go down river today."

"Why not, Wanny?"

"Git shot."

"Who's going to do the job?"

Wanny gave him the name of the Indian whom Jim had given the "grace" bounce. Jim thanked her for the information, but Wanny saw by his manner that he would pay no attention to it. She disappeared and was not seen around the camp again that day.

About sunset Jim, previous to riding to his claim, remembering Wanny's warning, went to the wall where his rifle hung to get it, but it was not there. Thinking some one had borrowed it and not caring to give up his trip because he hadn't it, he mounted and rode down the river. Suddenly in the road before him he heard a shot, followed by another from a thicker. Riding on, he was horror stricken at seeing Wanny lying on her face in the road across a rifle. Dashing to her, he threw himself from his horse and raised her tenderly. Life was fluttering, but her soul looked out through her eyes as clearly as it had ever looked. In Jim's revenge struggled with the gentler feelings, and he hastened to ask before it would be too late who had done the deed. There was no answer. The eye was clear, but the lips had lost the power to move. Then the eye lost its intelligence and became fixed.

It was not a minute from the time Jim saw her lie, seizing the rifle (his own), he was dashing into the thicket from which it was evident the shot had come. He heard a crashing in the bushes and saw the Indian who had threatened him running for his life.

Jim caught him, took him to camp, and before the sun had set the Indian was swinging from the limb of a tree.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

If the water is blue when cleaning windows they will retain their brilliancy longer and polish more quickly.

Before polishing knives warm the blade by the fire, for knives polish much better on a warm board than on a cold one.

During sickness it is a good plan to dispense with a counterpane, using a sheet instead. It is not only lighter to handle, but is more easily washed.

To restore polish to the surface of marble make a paste with oxide of tin or putty powder and water. Rub well in with a piece of rag; then polish with clean rag.

Vinegar should not be kept in a stone jar, as the acid may affect the glazing and the vinegar be rendered unwholesome. Glass jars are the best vinegar receptacles.

Never put down a carpet on a damp floor, for this—often the result of hurry and impatience on the part of weary house cleaners—is a frequent cause of carpet becoming moth eaten.

To stop a leak in a gaspipe mix yellow soap and whitening to a stiff, firm paste with water, then press well into the crack. It will harden and will answer temporarily as well as solder.

Dust, Flies and Pestilence.

Sanitary science has wholly vindicated the long feminine fight with dust and flies. Masculine wit once made light of woman's desperate determination to have no dust about; but dust, it is now known, holds bacteria, and bacteria are disease. Not a pile of neglected dust in a house but has in it the possibilities of pestilence. The man who blows off dust where a woman would wipe it off and then safely dispose of the dust is spreading germs broadcast. When a fly alights on food it may at any moment plant death there. Often it does. Every stable or vault which breeds flies breeds disease. A house, and particularly a kitchen, so screened that flies are few or none is by that much safer from disease, and it is a light, short illness which does not cost more than window screens. Exclude dust and flies, and a great multitude of mysterious cases of infection, especially among children, will be prevented. Keep a house scrupulously dusted and flyless, and the health of its inmates is protected from a daily danger.—Philadelphia Press.

Woman Can Use Tools.

"A woman is not a natural bungler with a hammer. She is not clumsy with any kind of tool. Therefore there is no reason in the nature of things why she should not venture to do some tinkering and small carpentering in her own house." Thus speaks a broad and liberal minded man in the Home Science Magazine. One of the curious things about women has been their disposition to believe whatever men may assert about them, their fatuousness in sharpening pencils and driving nails being among the amiable criticisms passed upon them by their male critics.

James Buckham begs leave to differ from them. He believes, on the contrary, that women can handle any tool suitable for use in the house quite as well as the unpracticed man, often better. And he urges the American housewife, especially if money is of any consideration to her, to get a small household tool chest and go ahead and use it.

Keeping the Mouth Well Formed.

No one will deny either the scarcity or the charm of a beautiful mouth, but among all the aids of beauty one seldom finds any lore pertaining to the cultivation of this feature. Many otherwise beautiful women have certain habits and tricks of curving and pursing the lips that render them for the time more than plain. Children acquire habits early in life of twisting their mouths or of stretching them or stuffing them with various articles that leave their unpleasant traces in after life. Parents and guardians should strive to correct all grinning and grinning propensities. The habit of sucking the under lip is often contracted in babyhood and should be promptly broken.

A Trick About Ironing.

The Chinese laundryman knows a little ironing trick worth trying. Instead of heating his iron just right for use he heats it scorching hot; then he plunges it into cold water for an instant, which cools the surface sufficiently to allow him to make several effective passes, the heat meantime gradually returning to the surface. If necessary he repeats this two or three times till the iron is of the right temperature to ply its vocation uninterruptedly. This saves the frequent changing of irons.

Alfing Beds.

The directions for alfing beds given in a domestic training school are worth noting. Place two chairs with seats together near an open window. Fold the counterpane neatly the long way and lay over the tops of the chairs, allowing the middle to sag down to the seats. Fold the blankets next and place over the counterpane, allowing a space between each for the circulation of air. Proceed in the same way with the rest of the bedclothing. Rent up the pillows and place them to air.

Green Vegetables.

"Picking our spinach, water cress, lettuce and other green things before they are washed is the right thing to do," says a veteran housekeeper. "Plunge them at once into the cold water douche, and all the dirt, grass and grubs will cling to the leafage and leave to be picked off individually. If looked over before washing they will drop by a little slap of the leaves against the palm of the hand. The whole picking over can be done more expeditiously dry than wet."

VOLUME OF TRADE.

Internal commerce conditions in the United States as reported by the Department of Commerce and Labor through its Bureau of Statistics show that the first half of the current year compares favorably with the corresponding period of 1902 or 1901. With a few exceptions the volume of trade thus far this year equalled, if not exceeded, that of last year, though occasionally falling below the high level of 1901. There is no evidence of a general recession in commercial activities corresponding to the extraordinary shrinkage in speculative values.

Western staples for this year have gained materially over last year, receipts of live stock at five markets having amounted to 15,125,661 head, compared with 14,358,345 head in the first six months of 1902, and 15,710,200 head in 1901. The numeric decrease from 1901 occurred in hogs, which have been averaging equal to, or heavier than in 1901, and much heavier than in 1902. Coincident with this, the trend of prices for hogs has been downward. The price at Chicago on July 1 was $5.79 per hundred, against $7.61 a year ago.

Wheat receipts at eight interior markets for the crop year ending June 30, 1903, were 236,675,669 bushels, compared with 221,766,387 bushels in 1902 and 217,058,743 bushels in 1901.

The total shipments of provisions from Chicago and Chicago points for the first 26 weeks if 1903 were 621,133 tons, against 653,217, this in the same period of 1902 and 566,929 tons in 1901. Shipments of flour from Minneapolis were 8,379,625 barrels, 7,633,708 barrels, and 7,218,721 barrels, respectively. Six months shipments of grain from Buffalo by rail were 44,453,900 bushels in 1903, 37,259,404 bushels in 1902, and 39,098,624 bushels in 1901.

On the Great Lakes the tonnage of coastwise traffic shipped from ports reporting to the end of June this year has totalled 20,113,227 tons compared with 19,439,453 tons and 12,621,977 tons in 1901. Coal tonnage for the half year amounted to 7,833,809 tons, of which 5,500,326 was shipped to domestic ports, and 2,333,483 tons to foreign points. Domestic iron ore shipments were 7,936,177 tons, of which 3,922,074 tons were shipped in June. The registered tonnage for six months this year in the domestic trade of the lakes reached 25,342,638 net tons in 1902. The freight tonnage via the Sault Ste. Marie Canals was 11,944,934 tons in 1903, 11,456,501 tons in 1902, and 6,767,120 tons in 1901.

At the North Atlantic seaboard grain receipts, including flour reduced to bushels, were as follows for six months:

New York, 62,052,140 bushels in 1903 and 48,831,490 bushels in 1902; Boston 16,867,234 bushels in 1903 and 13,576,398 bushels in 1902; Philadelphia, 20,442,659 bushels in 1903 and 16,865,078 bushels in 1902; Baltimore 16,190,324 bushels in 1903 and 16,069,077 bushels in 1902. Officially inspected receipts at the port of Portland, Maine, totalled 6,806,879 bushels, of which 1,653,193 bushels were of American origin and 5,153,686 bushels of Canadian origin.

Figures of coastwise shipments of coal are available for five months from the four ports of New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Newport News. In this period New York has reported 8,073,714 tons shipped Philadelphia 2,288,331 tons, Baltimore 373,962 tons, and Newport News 769,606 tons. Receipts of coal at Boston in six months this year were 3,056,972 tons compared with 2,177,732 tons in 1902.

In Southern territory the cotton crop movement covers the first ten months of the current commercial year. Out of a total available supply of 10,739,877 bales, 7,669,716 bales were port receipts, 1,064,140 bales overland shipments and 1,813,500 bales shipments to southern mills. The total American spinners' takings were 3,899,127 bales, compared with 3,727,737 bales in 1902, and 3,245,559 bales in 1901. New Orleans shipped 21,944,545 bushels of grain, including flour reduced to bushels, in the first six months of 1903, and 5,954,109 bushels in 1902. Galveston's figures were 9,713,131 bushels and 1,778,780 bushels respectively.

On the Pacific coast 115,284,134 feet of redwood lumber were shipped from California points in the first six months in 1902, and 102,218,403 feet in 1901. Citrus fruit shipments from Southern California for 35 weeks were 19,860 cars to July 2nd, 1903, 15,316 cars in 1902, and 22,887 cars in 1901. The cargo tonnage movement at Tacoma for this half year amounted to 511,382 tons and 714,456 tons for the first half of 1902.

River and canal traffic covers the Monongahela river, on which 528,556 tons were reported this half year against 4, 677,587 tons in 1902 at Louisville, Kentucky, 1,161,571 tons and 1,110,930 tons respectively. The New York State canals report a tonnage to the end of June, this year, of 1,031,130 tons, 902,093 tons in 1902 and 915,732 tons in 1901. Anthracite coal shipments aggregate 31,884,952 tons for six months in 1903, 18,731,880 tons in 1902 and 27,435,952 tons in 1901.

THE STATE PRESS.

Throughout the state from one end to another the general charge has been sent forth that the press was bought up a year ago in the interests of corporations against the best interests of the people as typified by the governor. He has stated this fact and in his address at the Monona Lake assembly he made bitter charges. Like Bryan he posed as the martyr in the cause of the people assailed by a hostile press bought up and servient to the whims of the rich with no thought of the poor man. The governor is like Bryan in many ways and this last display of the cloven hoof at the press of the state will not give him the prestige that he expected outside his own back. If the governor was not so inflammatory in his denunciations nor so dangerous in his speeches to the peace and welfare of the general public he would find the press of this state supporting a republican who stood for republicanism with all its heart and strength. Michigan had its Pingleism, Nebraska its Bryanism and now Wisconsin has its La Folletteism. Isms all of them and if history repeats itself Wisconsinism is doomed to a speedy destruction.

Russell Sage was eighty-eight Wednesday but he is not at all childish yet and will not give his money away for some days to come. It is also safe to say he will not die in the poor house.

UNCLE MOSE'S PHILOSOPHY.

De grave is whar Time's clock stops and eternty's wound up.

De Lord dignified labor by laborin' his self while on de curf.

Pore folks air in de happy stratto as dat is one Christ moved in.

De universe is de Lord's an' de sun is a diamond on his shirt front.

I hain't a kerrin' about social equality down here, as de Lord will fix it up yander.

When I see a catapillar merge into a butterfly I think uv a pore nigger mergin' into an angel.

De Lord ken transplant me frum behind my ole mule in de corn field to a front seat in heben.

Talk about baseball, I sets in my ole cabin at night an' watch de angels play wid shootin' stars.

De woods is a great city whose citizens is birds, reptiles, insects and animals, an' de Lord is mayor.

When a little baby dies and the ole dog howls under an apple tree, dar is a drove uv angels hoverin' about de place.

I can't help but have a little tech uv the big head when I think I is a joint heir wid Christ in that rich garden spot, heben.

When the sun drops to sleep at the end of daylight, while de whippoorwill sings I feel like goin' wild in hurrahs for de Lord.

"De angels uv de Lord encampeth about him dat feareth de Lord"—darefore don't dodge when he soft wid blows. Hits the swish of an angel's wing.

Folks that calls me small pertakers down here, will take off de hat to me when dey see me helpin' myself to de best things dat grow on de tree uv life up yander.

De Lord endowed us wid fun, darefore I ventures to hope dat dar will be possums an' watermelons in Beula Land.—J. T. Green in Ram's Horn.

PENCIL POINTS.

Personality is the blossom end of nationality.

The man who has blind faith can see through any adversity.

A nation cannot exist and thrive without certain magnificences.

Do not grumble, for millions of summers are yet stored away in the sun.

Make the best of every day, for when passed it is folded forever in the eternities.

Heart-throbbing and heart-breaking are, after all, congenial and kindred spirits, like the clouds and the sunshine—they must travel along together.

The perfect man and woman will not have come upon the earth, brother, before time shall have nailed down the coffin of the world.

The light that glids this age is but the sunrise light of humanity, and the shadows that afflict us are but the remnants of the darkness clinging to the substrata of our creation.

It is human nature to kneel reverently around the past-glorious memory that gateway to the human heart; that pathway that leads to consolation and dwells in the palace of our tears.

The warbling of birds; the sighing of the winds; the howling of the herds; the rushing of the waters; the peals of thunder are the organ notes in the cathedral of man built by God for his passage from birth to the eternities.—Times Herald.

Those Who Do Not Apply for Licenses by That Time, Must Be Examined.

According to requirements made at the time when the barber's license law went into effect, all practicing barbers who have not already done so must make application for licenses by next Tuesday. Those who do not make application before that time must go through the same formality as barbers who have never actively engaged in the tonorial art.

Permits To Be Granted
Those who decide to defer their application until after Tuesday will then be obliged to make application to the board for examination, as though they were novices in barbering. They will then be granted permits to practice their trade until the time of the next regularly appointed meeting of the board, at which time they will be obliged to present themselves, and take the examination in the rudiments of the business.

Board to Meet
The state barbers board will meet in this city next Monday, the other two members, Messrs. Douhan and Heine, meeting with M. H. Whitaker of this city. This will probably be one of their busiest sessions, as many of the barbers have deferred taking action in accordance with the barbers' bill until the last possible moment, and the applications will probably pile in rapidly the last few days of grace.

TERRITORY WOOL IS FINE QUALITY

Superintendent of the Rock River Woolen Mills Says Fleece Is Fine and Soft.

"Only one grade of wool is used in the Rock River woolen mills," said A. G. Jones, superintendent of the factory. "It is all of the finest grade of territory wool, and has no chaff or foreign matter. Nothing is used by a very clean and bright quality. The wool of sheep raised in a state where the soil contains much alkali is more tender and dry than that of sheep raised on fertile soil."

DARKTOWN TO HO-NO-NE-GAH

Colored People Rally at the Park on the Interurban Line Thursday—Many Attended.

Lucky was the man who could get his shoes shined for love or money yesterday. Every colored porter in the city, so it is said, attended the Emancipation Day celebration at Ho-No-Ne-Gah Park. Every Interurban car carried a number of persons of dusky hue, and a very different class of individual than appeared to be from the "nigger" portrayed by Senator Tillman.

YATES CONDEMNS LYNCHING BEES

SAYS MOB RULE IS ANARCHY

Requests Officials to Give Him Full Information Regarding Events Which Have Occurred in Their Territory—Means to Prosecute Offenders.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 7.—Gov. Yates denounced lynching and mob rule as anarchy and started the opening wedge for an investigation of recent occurrences in this state in letters sent to the sheriffs of Vermillion, St. Clair and Alexander counties. The letter to Sheriff Whitlock of Vermillion county is as follows:

"The prevalence of lynch law and mob rule in various parts of the United States has for some time been alarming, but not until recently has it made its appearance in the state of Illinois. Within the last six months in the counties of Alexander, St. Clair and Vermillion there has been an outburst of lawlessness of this character in its worst form. This lawlessness has earned and evoked the righteous indignation and vigorous condemnation of every citizen possessed of the least sense of decency.

Mob Law is Anarchy.
"There is only one thing to be done in this connection by officers of the law. Such officers have been entrusted with the confidence, safety, property and lives of their fellow citizens, and they have taken a solemn oath to enforce and sustain the constitution and laws of their country and their state. The obligation resting upon them is obligatory and imperative. Mob rule is anarchy. The prevalence of lynch law will result in no peace, no safety and no liberty.

"If a hundred or a thousand men, infuriated and inflamed by passion or prejudice, or intoxicated or through any other cause, shall be allowed to use the power to say whether you or I or any other citizen shall live or die, then there is and can be no safety, no peace and no liberty, and in that case all the efforts of all the men of all the past, who have struggled and fought and died for liberty, have been in vain.

To Execute Laws.
"Under all these circumstances it becomes my duty, under section 6 of article 5 of the constitution of 1870, which specifically states that it shall be the duty of the governor to take care that the laws be faithfully executed, to do all within my power to prevent the repetition of the lynchings which have occurred in this state, and to punish relentlessly those which have occurred.

"To this end I now write you in my capacity as chief executive of the state, bound by my oath and required by the constitution to enforce the law, to request that you forward at once a brief statement in writing of all the facts within your knowledge in regard to the recent lynching in your county, together with any recommendations you may have to make which will prevent such an occurrence again in your county, or in any other county in this state."

NURSERY NOTES.

Don't expect children to be beautiful unless healthy, happy and contented. Don't let a stooping lesson, such as writing or drawing, end without some simple arm exercise.

It is a mistake to believe that children can do as much work as grown people and that the more hours they study the more they learn.

The pains of children are often better relieved by external heat than by the use of drugs, and in the absence of a doctor this remedy should invariably be tried first.

Find out what the special tastes of your children are and develop them instead of spending time, money and patience in forcing them into studies that are repugnant to them.

A small bunch of absorbent cotton makes a splendid powder puff for baby's morning bath and is desirable, as it will be discarded for a fresh one oftener than a regular puff would be.

Children who suffer from headache without any apparent cause should be taken to an oculist to have their eyes examined. They may be overstraining them without being conscious that they are doing so.

The "Scrappy" Neck and a Remedy.

The thin, "long drawn out" neck is indeed a trial. A smooth, round, white neck is really a very essential element in beauty's make up. To some girls a thin neck is really not a source of misery, but to the average girl who wears evening gowns and low collars it is a very important thing. By perseverance and proper treatment the scrappy neck can be overcome, and this treatment is massage. In the absence of a professional operator one can carry out the simple movements with excellent results. Place the hands under the chin and press firmly but gently into the tissues, making an upward rotary movement as far as the back of the ears. Repeat this treatment for fifteen or twenty minutes every night before retiring. The hands may be softened with some pure emollient during the manipulation. The effect upon the muscles is to develop them by increasing the blood supply. They become firm, taut and elastic, and they remain so. Of course one should not, as most women are prone, expect wonders wrought in a night or even a week. The desired results require time as well as perseverance.—American Queen.

Avoid Mannerisms.

Little nervous mannerisms, a lack of repose, consciousness of one's clothes, are all bad form and should be avoided.

A girl should be taught to carefully dress herself and then think no more about it. No touches to the hair or pulling on and off of gloves should be permitted after she has left her room.

For this early training, which is irksome at first, she never comes to be grateful when she grows older.

No one can make a good impression or talk agreeably if absorbed in one's own appearance.

It is a mark of good breeding to never be conscious of one's clothes.

One often sees a girl in a street car drawing on gloves or adjusting a veil. Even at the theater one frequently sees a girl buttoning her gloves, rearranging a jewel on her bodice or the ornaments in her hair.

These self-conscious manners in public are bad form and detract from a woman's charm.—Philadelphia North American.

Woman and Color.

Balzac once said that the way to gauge a woman's character was by her choice of color and that nothing expressed character so much as clothes, and he advised those in doubt as to how best they might reveal their innermost selves by their choice of garb, what garments and what tones they must wear. For instance, if a woman had a lively expression pale coloring, red lips and wavy hair and a round, full neck she should place in her hair a crimson flower, her dress should be of red tulle, cut low to show the dazzling whiteness of her shoulders; long, floating sleeves of tulle which should half conceal, half reveal her snowy arms, and a belt of red moire to encircle her flexible but not too slender waist. Never under any circumstances should a woman of such coloring wear blue or ineffective drab.

For Crawling Babies.

Children of nine or ten months old love to be put down on a soft rug with a toy or two and allowed to crawl about to their hearts' content. A knitted overall, something like stockings and drawers in one, pulled over their feet and fastened round the waist prevents risk of cold, and baby will amuse himself quite happily for hours. Don't neglect a little one to play with some one else unless you are prepared to give up a great deal of time to his amusement. He will be just as happy inventing games for himself if he is used to it from the first.—American Queen.

Linon and Cotton Goods.

The reason why linen and cotton become yellow when laid away for a time is that they have not been properly rinsed. At all times it is important that clothing should be thoroughly rinsed in sufficient water to remove all traces of soap, and when it is to be laid away for any time it is imperative that the rinsing should be thorough and that the articles be dried out of doors.

Drawn Butter.

To make drawn butter cook together until they bubble a tablespoonful each of butter and flour, and when they are blended add a cup of hot milk. Stir to a smooth sauce, season to taste and serve. Some persons make drawn butter with boiling water instead of milk.

A golden stream of crisp appetizing browned biscuit reaching every nook and corner of the land.

A WAY OPEN.

Many A Janesville Reader Knows It Well.

There is a way open to convince the greatest skeptic. Scores of Janesville people have made it possible. The public statement of their experience is proof of the like of which has never been produced before in Janesville. Read this case of it given by a citizen:

Mr. John Stetson, of the Hotel Myers day clerk, says: "A physician pronounced my trouble kidney complaint. If the severe pain across the small of my back is any indication of the said complaint, I guess I had it. For two years I suffered with attacks sometimes virulent, sometimes a dull grinding ache, which robbed me of considerable energy. I used in addition to doctor's prescriptions several preparations said to be sure cures for kidney complaint, but until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at the People's Drug Co's. drug store, I received little if any permanent relief. I took a thorough course of treatment prescribed by Doan's Kidney Pills and it cured me. Up to date I have not noticed any recurrence of my old trouble."
